THE DEAD CONSUL

His Remains Brought to Honolulu on Saturday.

SHORT SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

Valuable Services Rendered Japanese Gov't.

But Little Known of Family.
Funeral Services Tuesday—Full Naval, Military and Civic.

The news of the death of Commissioner Hawes, published in the Advertiser Saturday morning, was a shock to the entire community. Though his condition was known here, it was at no time thought that he would not rally to recovery, until the carbuncle developed, then little hope was entertained by those who know the nature of the disease.

The dead Commissioner was noted for his genial manners, his generosity and his ability as a diplomat, and was respected by every one with whom he came in contact. At his establishment at Palama he entertained royally, and his door was always open to the cultured people of the Islands. His death will be a sad blow to his coterie of friends, as well as to those with whom he had relations in his official capacity as the representative of Great Britain.

Regarding his family, but little is known to his friends here. His nearest relative is a married sister, now living in England, and the Hunts, of Casham, Hampshire, England, are his cousins. He was very reserved regarding his family connections, though he frequently entertained his friends with narratives in his experience in Africa and Japan. The following is taken from the English Blue Book:

"Hawes, Albert George Sidney, F. R. G. S., entered the Royal Marines, December, 1859; retired, February, 1869. Was in the Japanese Service from January 1, 1871, to January 31, 1884, and received the Third Class of the Order of the Rising Sun. Was appointed Consul for the territories of the African Kings and Chiefs in the districts adjacent to Lake Nyassa, January 16, 1885. Was employed on special duty at Zanzibar from December 30, 1888, till June 15, 1889, and was Acting Agent and Consul-General there, from April 4 to 29, 1889. Was appointed Consul for the Society Islands, to reside at Tahiti, October 1, 1889."

Shortly after his arrival here in August, 1894, to succeed Minister Resident Wodehouse, retired, Commissioner Hawes said to a friend that while in the British Naval Service in a subordinate position, a vacancy occurred in a place above his rank, and he applied for it. Failing to secure it, he tendered his resignation, and soon after, upon the suggestion of a friend, entered into correspondence with the Imperial Japanese Government regarding a position in the navy. It was the wish of the Japanese Government to organize a marine corps in the navy, and it was for this position that deceased applied.

The organization at his hands was complete, and he remained in the service of Japan for 13 years. He returned, then, to England, and was sent to Africa on a diplomatic mission. When the Consularship of two places, of which Tahiti was one, was offered him, he hesitated for some time, on account of his health, but finally selected Tahiti. After a short residence there his health was impaired, and he went to San Francisco on a sailing vessel, and was placed in a hospital for medical treatment, returning to his post some months afterward. When Minister Wodehouse was retired, Honolulu was offered Commissioner Hawes, and on his arrival he was given a cordial welcome by the British residents. Shortly after his arrival he rented the residence of S. Roth, on Kinau street, where he entertained liberally. Afterwards he leased the premises of Liliuokalani, at Palama, and at that place his entertainments have continued at intervals. A few months ago his engagement to Miss Gay was announced, and he was the recipient of the warmest congratulations of his friends here. Having reached the age of 55, Captain Hawes was considered a confirmed bachelor.

The wedding was to have been an elaborate affair, and was to have taken place here on September 1st, and it was understood that the Commissioner and his bride would continue to reside at Palama.

The impression has gone abroad generally that the late British Commissioner died alone from the effects of a carbuncle. From the contents of a letter, written to a very dear friend in Honolulu, this would seem to be not the case.

It will be remembered that, on going to Hilo on the Kinau, Mr. Hawes is reported to have had a fall in his cabin. The effects of this were much more serious than at first supposed. According to Mr. Hawes' own words, he was stunned. The Kinau was rolling considerably along the Hawaii coast, and Mr. Hawes, thinking that a friend, who was sitting near, might be thrown down, arose from his chair to give assistance. The steamer recovered and went in the opposite direction. Mr.

ALBERT GEORGE SIDNEY HAWES,
The Dead Consul.

Hawes was thrown across the deck, injuring quite severely both of his legs. Before falling completely over, the steamer went the other way again, and Mr. Hawes was thrown down with the result of a severe injury to the back of his neck, as well as bad bruises on other parts of his body. He was very much weakened by this unfortunate experience, and when the carbuncle came on, his physical condition was not able to stand the shock.

Mr. Hawes was a man, who from his experience in the service of the Queen, had become accustomed to looking at matters very seriously, and after he had been in Hilo town but a few days, considered the possibly serious result of the trouble with his neck. Then he was confined to his bed, and the sickness grew from day to day, all the while weakening his system and rendering chances for recovery small.

On Monday and Tuesday there seemed to be signs of a rally, and hopes were high in the breasts of the friends who surrounded him. On Wednesday the weakness was more noticeable again, and on Thursday all hope was gone, and he died at the time stated above.

On the arrival of the body in Honolulu, it was given over to E. A. Williams for embalming, and afterwards moved to the residence of the deceased. Yesterday A. St. Martin Mackintosh and David Shanks were in charge of the residence.

As to his last moments, there is but little to be said. Through the whole of the sickness he was very cheerful and had not one word of complaint. A ray of brightness was thrown over the last days of his life by the pres-
